BEFORE THE GAME

By Steve Snapp

Assistant Sports Information Director

The last time Texas Christian and Ohio State got together for a football game was the first game of the 1969 season. Buckeye fans will long remember that season as their favorites, led by Rex Kern and his gifted band of classmates, put on one awesome scoring display after another averaging 42.5 points a game on the year.

As fate would have it, TCU returns to Columbus today to face another high scoring Buckeye offense. Certainly, based on their 56-7 opening game win over Minnesota two weeks ago, this Ohio State team has the potential to put points on the board. More significantly, it has shown the ability to score in just about every way imaginable.

One Chicago sports scribe feels that Buckeye coach Woody Hayes has so many weapons on his '73 squad he should be made to attend the next arms limitation meeting. That, while an exaggeration, is not a bad evaluation. Against Minnesota the Buckeyes found five different ways to get into the end zone: rush, pass, dive, kickoff and punt return. That was not a bad Minnesota team that Cal Stoll brought to Ohio Stadium, but once the Ohio State arsenal got rolling it was no contest.

The kickoff and punt returns drew special comment in the press box. Both were extremely well executed and a good deal of credit goes to Rudy Hubbard, coach of the offensive specialty team and Chuck Clausen, his counterpart on defense, who have worked long hours this fall to give Ohio State explosive return units. All too often that aspect of the game is treated as an afterthought or ignored completely. But given proper attention, a good return can be the catalyst that propels a team to victory. Witness Archie Griffin's 93-yard kick runback against Minnesota that in the space of ten seconds nullified a Gopher touchdown and put the momentum back on Ohio State's side. That was the back breaker.

But don't make the mistake of labeling this edition of the Buckeyes as just an offensive ball club. No indeed! The defense sparkled against the Gophers, allowing a scant 65 yards in the air and holding their vaunted running attack to 193 yards. The lone Minnesota touchdown came as a result of an intercepted pass that gave the Gophers great field position. Other than that, they never really threatened.

The Buckeyes came through their opener with no major injuries and today's lineup will be pretty much the same group that started two weeks ago. One addition will be closed side defensive end Tom Marendt who was held out of the Minnesota game to allow his knee (operated on last spring) more time to heal. He should see at least limited action today.

Texas Christian, will test the Buckeyes with some pretty good weapons of their own. The Horned Frogs, a wishbone oriented team in years past, have switched to the "I" this season and it brought them a 49-13 victory over the University of Texas at Arlington last week.

One good reason for the switch in offenses is tail back Mike Luttrell. Luttrell, a 6-1, 211-pound junior scampered through the Southwest Conference last year like a Texas jackrabbit, gaining 905 yards and scoring 10 touchdowns. With Luttrell as the "up back" in the "I" the Horned Frogs have a good outside threat to either side of the field.

Inside there is fullback Ronnie Webb, 5-11, 206, who started every game last year and averaged 5.1 yards per carry in SWC action.

TCU didn't throw the ball very often last season, but that was because quarterback Kent Marshall was hurt early. Marshall connected at a .586 clip when healthy, completing 17 of 29 tosses, so the pass could be back today. Flanker Steve Patterson (22 catches in '72) and Dave Duncan at split end are the top receivers.

Defensively, eight starters return, including the entire front four. Big tackle Charlie Davis, 6-3, 260, is the best of the group. Davis earned All-SWC honors last year and was a second team All-America. He specializes in making life miserable for quarterbacks according to Notre Dame coach Ara Parsegian who watched Davis sack his signal caller four times last year. Davis had fifteen solos that game.

This will be the sixth game between TCU and the Buckeyes since the series began in 1937. Ohio State has won three and TCU one. The 1961 game ended in a 7-7 tie.

New Radio Network Reaches Across Ohio

By Marv Homan, Ohio State Sports Information Director

Tom Hamlin (left) and Dale Conquest look over Ohio Stadium from the Press Box prior to the Minnesota game. Hamlin calls the play-by-play on the Buckeyes' new radio network and Conquest provides the expert analysis. WTVN Radio (Columbus) serves as the flagship station for the 36-station network.

Dale Conquest and Ohio State Coach Woody Hayes tape the "Woody Hayes Show" that is heard prior to every Buckeye game. Hayes discusses Buckeye personnel and evaluates upcoming opponents on the show.

The 1973 football season marks the beginning of a new concept in radio broadcasting at The Ohio State University and in the Big Ten Conference. For starting this year, there will be one official radio station broadcasting Buckeye football games feeding a network of stations throughout the state of Ohio. Heretofore as many as eight stations originated Ohio State games.

Last spring University and Athletic Department officials decided to offer Ohio State football games for bid, with the successful bidder being awarded the exclusive broadcast rights for a three-year period. The successful bidder was required to form a network, consisting of a minimum of 19 radio outlets, distributed geographically around the state, so as to guarantee complete radio coverage in any section of Ohio.

Radio station WTVN in Columbus was awarded the contract and thus a new broadcasting policy was instituted.

While the policy of exclusive broadcasts is new to the Big Ten area, it is not new in other areas of the country. In fact, exclusive broadcasts are the rule rather than the exception in most regions. The one station feeding one network idea has been a long standing policy for schools in the Pacific Eight Conference, the Southwest Conference, the South Eastern Conference, the Atlantic Coast Conference, the Southern Conference, and Western Athletic Conference and for some universities in the Big Eight. The Big Ten has been the last major conference to employ the exclusivity concept. Indications are that several other Big Ten universities will follow Ohio State's new policy.

Ohio State Athletic Director J. Edward Weaver commented about the Network, "I feel this is a forward step in our broadcasting policy. Our improved coverage carries the Ohio State football story to more people around the state."

Carl Wagner, station manager of WTVN, has put together a 36-station network for the 1973 season, exceeding the requirements specified by the University.

Tom Hamlin, veteran sports director of WHIO in Dayton, has been selected to do the play-by-play and Dale Conquest, sports director of WTVN-TV in Columbus will do the color.

The programming begins one-half hour before kickoff with a 15-minute "Woody Hayes Show," in which Conquest and Woody discuss the upcoming game. After the game, Hamlin conducts "The Coaches Show," featuring two members of the Ohio State coaching staff, who analyze the game.

Sponsors of the WTVN-Ohio State Football Network are, Capital Financial Services and Motorists Insurance.

GRAF MAKES DELAYED DEBUT

Larry Graf watches the action intently during the first half of the OSU-Minnesota game.

When Larry Graf walked onto the playing field early in the third quarter of the Ohio State-Minnesota game two weeks ago, he was making his first appearance in a college football game in almost four years. He also was making a remarkable comeback.

Graf is the Buckeye senior whose varsity career has been delayed three full seasons because of a frustrating combination of illness and then injury. But he steadfastly refused to give up during that time and it has finally paid off. Given a fifth, and final, year to complete his eligibility, the Akron, Ohio native is finally getting a chance to do what he likes most — play football. But it hasn't been an easy road back.

Graf was one of the most sought-after players in Ohio at St. Vincent High School. After more than a hundred scholarship offers, he selected Ohio State where he played offensive guard as a freshman and figured to move into the starting lineup, or at least see a lot of action, the following season.

But that never transpired. Larry became ill at the beginning of his sophomore year, with what was later diagnosed as hepatitis and was ruled out for the season.

"It was a shock to me," says the curly-haired Graf. "I had never been seriously ill and then all of a sudden there I was with hepatitis of all things.

"I felt terribly dejected when the doctors told me I was out for the year, but I knew they were right. I got tired easily and didn't seem to have any strength. Whenever we would practice I became light-headed and dizzy."

Unfortunately those same symptoms were present the following year. Graf was again scratched from the roster and doctors advised him to give up any hope of ever playing college football.

But Larry wasn't ready to call it quits. He worked out that winter to get in shape and in the fall of 1972 he talked the coaches and doctors into letting him try it one more time on a conditional basis. To the surprise of everyone he was able to practice with no ill effects.

"We watched Larry closely," recalls Ohio State trainer Al Hart. "We were looking for an increased blood count or tenderness in the liver area, but everything was normal and our doctors gave him the green light to play."

The green light didn't stay on very long, however. On the opening play of the first scrimmage last year Graf suffered a broken ankle and for the third straight season was forced to spend his time on the sidelines instead of the playing field.

This season the 6-1, 212-pound guard dutifully reported to practice and has somehow managed to stay healthy. He is playing excellent football according to Ohio State guard coach Ed Ferkany.

"The long layoff has hurt Larry, that was to be expected," assesses Ferkany. "But he has a lot of natural ability and tremendous desire working in his favor. Little by little he is getting the feel of things again."

Graf agrees with his coach's evaluation.

"I think I am at least two weeks behind everyone else," he says. "The pin in my ankle has slowed me down a little and I'm not as sure of myself as I would like to be."

"But," he added, "I think that will change as I get more playing time in."

Graf considers playing in the Minnesota game one of his greatest thrills.

"It was something special to me," says Graf who is a marketing major. "I have waited a long time to finally be a part of the team effort."

As the 1973 season approached, Larry was understandably nervous.

"I started getting butterflies the Wednesday before the Minnesota game," admits Graf. "It wasn't the thought of the large crowd so much as it was the anticipation of seeing what I could do against another team."

Despite the continued disappointments of the past three seasons, Larry says he never thought about giving up football.

"I guess football is in my blood," says Graf, whose father, Fritz, is a National Football League official. "My family encouraged me to keep playing and I don't think I ever really considered quitting."

"Even when the doctors said I was finished, I kept hoping that there was somehow I could play again."

He got his wish two weeks ago with just over four minutes of playing time against Minnesota. Chances are he will play a lot more before the season is over.

Making his debut after three years of waiting, Graf gets into the thick of things early in the third quarter with Ohio State leading 42-7.

TCU BEGINS A NEW CENTURY

Celebrating its Centennial in 1973, Texas Christian University began its second century this fall. Each year TCU brings to its campus about 6,500 students from most states and 30 countries outside the United States. Faculty come from leading universities and have earned for TCU those high accreditations and membership, such as a chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, held by the nation's leading schools.

In 1873, its founders opened the doors of Add-Ran Male and Female College to 13 Students from the immediate area. The coeducational College (a bold innovation in those days) was established in Thorp Spring, on the cattle frontier 40 miles southwest of Fort Worth. It stressed character as well as knowledge, a philosophy which continues to be a guiding force. TCU is still committed to quality rather than quantity education, to serve to others, to involvement with life around it.

The founding brothers, Addison and Randolph Clark, sold their personal possessions to get a few thousand dollars with which to build college structures. Today TCU has a physical plant valued at $52 million, a permanent endowment of $32.5 million and an annual operating budget of $19 million. There are 60 buildings on the open, tree-shaded 243-acre campus.

The frontier college stressed the classics and the six departments announced in the first catalog

TCU Stadium As Seen Through Frog Fountain

were: 1) Ancient Language, 2) English Language, 3) Mathematics, 4) Physical Sciences, 5) Mental and Moral Sciences and 6) Social and Civil History. A century later, TCU's Academic program is divided into seven schools and colleges. Courses lead to 11 bachelor degrees in more than 50 major fields of study, 15 master degrees in 46 areas of specialization, doctor of ministry degree and doctor of philosophy degree in six fields — chemistry, English, history, mathematics, physics, and psychology.

As at most schools at that time, the early academic aim was to transmit knowledge. It is still an aim. But uncovering new knowledge is also an important part of TCU today, and significant research is under way in fields ranging from basic physics and chemistry to Russian theater to geologic formations in Mexico to early Texas history to population characteristics and crime statistics to drug addiction treatment.

From the country isolation of 100 years ago has emerged a university which participates in the life of the surrounding area. A Pastoral Care Center counsels persons with problems, a speech-hearing clinic helps children communicate through the spoken word, environmental studies use the urban area as a "laboratory" for data collection, evening and special courses are offered to all area citizens for continuing adult education through the master's degree level.

Founded by a family of preacher-teachers, official church affiliation came in 1889. The university is related to the Christian church (Disciples of Christ) and has one of the most multi-denominational student bodies of any church-related school. Participation in religious activities is encouraged but voluntary. The campus ministry includes representatives of several religious groups.

TCU has been located in Fort Worth since the fall of 1910. Its first 23 years were in Thorp Spring. From 1895 to 1910 it was located in Waco — where it gained its present name — but was forced to rebuild when a fire destroyed its main building there. Fort Worth was chosen from among several cities that offered sites.

Newest structures on campus, opened in the of 1972, are a residence hall (one of 16, housing total of 3,000 students) and the Cyrus K. and Ann C. Rickel Building for Health, Physical Education and Recreation which includes facilities such as these for instructional and recreational use: An aquatics center with swimming and diving pools, a ten-court handball center, indoor area for golf and archery, two gym size games areas, specially-designed areas for dance, gymnastics, combatives and body conditioning. The lighted Potishman Tennis Center adjoins the building.

TIDBITS

Ohio State fullback Champ Henson moved to sixth on the Buckeyes' all-time scoring list with three touchdowns against Minnesota. Henson has now scored 23 touchdowns in 12 varsity games. John Brockington is the fifth best OSU scorer with 24 TD's.

Linebacker Bruce Elia was honored for making the "Play of the Game" against Minnesota. Elia, a junior who was switched from fullback to linebacker last spring, made the hit that jarred the ball loose from Gopher speedster Rick Upchurch on an attempted kick return and then made the fumble recovery.

Archie Griffin and Neal Colzie were the NCAA leaders in all-purpose running and punt returns respectively after one game. Griffin also ranked 14th in rushing yardage.

Bill Gast of Pfeifer Printing Co. (printers of the Ohio State football program) arrived late at the Minnesota game. When he went to buy the program he had been working on for almost a month (you guessed it) they were sold out.

Introducing the 1974 Chevelle Malibu Classic. Luxury just stopped being a spectator sport.

That's right. This is a 1974 Chevelle. The brand-new Malibu Classic.

Which means that now you can do a whole lot more than look at luxury cars in football programs. You can participate.

At any Chevrolet dealer's.

All this, for the price of a Chevelle.

Chevrolet. Building a better way to see the U.S.A.

University Boasts Modern Medical Library

By The Ohio State University News Services

The new Health Sciences Library at Ohio State University is one of the most advanced libraries in the country. Opened in May, it contains an automated bookstack system to locate and file approximately 175,000 books. It is only the fourth library in the country to have the system (Rand-triever, manufactured by Remington Rand Corp.), according to Jo Ann Johnson, director of the Health Sciences Library.

The six-floor library at 376 W. 10th Ave., serves between 4,000 and 5,000 users in the colleges of medicine, dentistry, and optometry, she said. Seating is available for more than 1,100 faculty and students, with individual study carrels comprising nearly 70 percent of the seating.

The library cost of $4,876,500 included $1,406,205 in federal funds.

"The bookstack system finds and delivers a book via a conveyor belt in about a minute," Miss Johnson said. The chief advantages of the system are that it save space and is speedy and accurate.

"The bookstacks in the new library take up about 15 percent of the total space while in most libraries the stacks take 40 to 60 percent of the space," she added.

Aisles in the stacks are narrow, about 15 inches, and the shelves rise through two stories of the library — 22 feet in all.

Miss Johnson explained the accuracy of the system reduces the problem of misfiling. Also, book theft should dwindle because the stacks are closed to users.

The library is connected with the computerized circulation system of University Libraries, made up of a main library and 23 branch libraries. This circulation system is the first of its type in the country and permits library users to place telephone calls to learn titles and authors and to charge out books.

The new library replaces one located in Hamilton Hall since 1925. The old library, originally 1,200 square feet in area, was expanded to 7,200 square feet in 1951. The new library has 70,000 square feet, the library director said.

Other features of the modern library are: a rare book room, group study rooms, a computer-assisted instruction area to be completed later, and connections to MEDLINE, an international computerized information system of medical journals.

Miss Johnson explained that the automated bookstack system works like this: A library staff member sends instructions over a terminal to an electronic device in an aisle. The device travels on vertical and horizontal columns in the aisles. It picks out a small bin of books containing a requested one, then travels to the end of the aisle and places it on a conveyor belt.

At the terminal, the staff member selects the requested book from the bin, usually containing about eight volumes, and sends the bin back for refiling.

A glass window permits observation of the system.

Too Much Greene for Gophers

Quarterback Cornelius Greene holds the ball over his head in jubilation after scoring his first collegiate touchdown against Minnesota. Greene's score came early in the first quarter and gave Ohio State a 14-0 lead. (Photo by Chance Brockway)

It would be hard to name the happiest Ohio State player following the Buckeyes' opening day 56-7 win over Minnesota two weeks ago. But a good bet would be sophomore quarterback Cornelius Greene. He certainly had plenty of reason to celebrate.

Starting his first varsity football game, Greene performed brilliantly against the Gophers. He directed the Buckeyes to four first half touchdowns in six possessions on drives of 66, 23, 68 and 35 yards. He scored one touchdown himself (pictured above) on a perfectly executed four-yard option play and wound up the day with 84 yards rushing in ten tries.

Despite his slight build (6-0, 168) Greene demonstrated his durability by shaking off several tackles by big Minnesota linemen and picking up big yardage before he could finally be wrestled down. More than once he crawled out from under huge pile ups and returned to the huddle unscathed. He even made a touchdown saving tackle after a Minnesota defender had intercepted one of his passes and apparently had a clear path to the goal line.

Greene first began drawing notices a year ago in fall practice with his cat-quick moves and clever ball handling. In spring practice he again impressed the coaches, especially in the Spring Game when he passed for 137 yards and ran for another 116.

A former All-America at Dunbar High School in Washington, D.C., Greene got a chance to start this fall when last year's regular Greg Hare pulled a hamstring muscle. He certainly made the most of the opportunity.
